COURSE DESCRIPTION:
This course explores the design and use of digital technologies for the purpose of influencing individuals’ attitudes or behaviors in a number of contexts (i.e., e-commerce, social marketing, education, health, etc.). Computers as persuasive technology or “captology” is an interdisciplinary field that draws on theories and methods of psychology, human behavior studies, communication and human-computer interaction to inform the design of persuasive experiences delivered through interactive and computational technologies.

COURSE OBJECTIVES:
At the end of the course, the student will be able to:

1. Describe the theoretical and practical foundations of “captology” or the use of computers as persuasive technology.
2. Discuss theories of persuasion and human behavior that can be used to inform the design of persuasive technology.
3. Identify emerging trends in the use of computers as persuasive technologies in different contexts.
4. Discuss the ethical considerations in designing persuasive technologies.
5. Write a critical and evidence-based analysis of trends and patterns, policy or ethical issues related to the design or application of persuasive technology.

COURSE MATERIALS:
There will be no required textbook for this class. A list of readings will be provided on the course site. Students will have 2-3 readings per topic.
COURSE ASSIGNMENTS AND EVALUATION:

Assign. #1 Current Research Presentation & Discussion Lead (10%) - You will present current research on a topic from the course outline – the presentation will focus on the main findings of an original research study, its main contribution/s to the field or current thinking, as well as its practical and/or theoretical implications. The article must have been published in a reputable peer-reviewed journal in the last 5 years. After your short presentation, you will lead the class in an interactive discussion of the course topic for that week. The discussion should be no longer than 20 minutes and should primarily be audio-based (not chat-based). To facilitate this, you are encouraged to think about 2-3 discussion prompts (or interesting discussion questions). At the end of the discussion, you will be in charge of summarizing main points discussed and wrapping up the class session for that day.

*NOTE: You must consult your professor about the appropriateness of your peer-reviewed article before finalizing your choice. If your discussion topic and final paper are related, you may also include this peer-reviewed article in your annotated bibliography. The article, however, cannot be listed as one of the readings for that week.

Assign. #2 Annotated Bibliography (25%) - For your final project, you will write a final research paper on a topic related to the use of persuasive technology. Prior to writing the final paper, you will search for and critically evaluate 5 credible and relevant resources that you will use to support your research paper. Sources must be about original research (not literature reviews) and published in the last 5 years. After reading and analyzing each resource critically, you will write an annotated bibliography for each source. Each citation should include the complete bibliographic information of the resource PLUS a 300-400 word annotation. This annotation must be a critical evaluation of the resource - not a mere repetition of what is in the abstract. The Annotated Bibliography is a good way to start thinking about your final paper and refining your main argument – if you do a good job with it, you will have basically done at least 1/3 of the work for your final paper.

Assign. #3 Final Research Paper (30%) - You will write an original, evidence-based paper focusing on any of the following: trends and patterns, policy or ethical issues, theory and research related to the use, application and/or design of persuasive technology. As part of the exercise, you are required to provide an overview of the topic or issue, critically review and analyze scholarly literature and present this as evidence for your main argument or thesis, identify and discuss gaps in the literature, and recommend areas for future research. The paper should be around 3000 to 4000 words (this word count does not include the bibliography, or any figures or tables presented).

Assign. #4 Final Paper Presentation (10%) – At the end of the semester you will share the results of your research with the class in a 10-15 minute presentation.

Read & React Discussion Posts (20%) – This requirement comes in two parts.
(1) READ: Post critical comments on the course readings on 8 different weeks of your choice. For each post: (a) identify 2 main takeaways from the week’s readings and briefly explain why these resonated with you - these should be critical reflections and not summaries; and (b) pose one critical issue related to the weekly topic that needs further discussion. Discussion board postings must be 150-200 words in length. Original posts must be submitted by midnight EST on the Sunday before the topic will be discussed in class.

(2) REACT: Post a substantive comment on another student’s posting for that week. These comments must be no less than 100 words in length and must be posted no later than two days after the topic is covered in class (by midnight EST on Wednesdays).

All posts must be reflective and substantive (not summaries of readings). There are no quizzes or exams for this course, so posts are important to keep students engaged in the course content and to demonstrate your ability to make clear connections between the readings and the topic as well as your preparedness to discuss weekly topics.
