COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This course provides background information about the information profession and aims to facilitate optimal information management. Topics include librarianship, the disciplines of library-information science (LIS) and of information technology (IT), the organizations and institutions of the information-provision environment, as well as the applications of technology to information provision.

COURSE OBJECTIVES:

At the end of the course, the student will be able to:

1. Demonstrate lifelong learning skills through differentiating and describing information provision environments and the knowledge, skills, and abilities associated with these.

2. Recognize opportunities and challenges within LIS/IT as future professionals by describing and discussing major issues (i.e., declining budgets, changing demographics) within different information provision environments.

3. Think critically about six key issues affecting LIS/IT and identify how they can effectively shape these in the future, through synthesis of and response to sets of readings through written assignments and discussion board postings.

4. Demonstrate the ability to identify key LIS/IT literature, develop skills to critically assess that literature base, and understand the criteria by which to contribute to the literature by using literature resources to illustrate key concepts in written work and chat discussion.
5. Demonstrate understanding of the CCI graduate program by integrating faculty research into their assignments, interacting with guest faculty speakers, and creating their SLIS program plan of study by understanding course descriptions and offerings.

6. Use FSU and CCI/SLIS online academic, instructional and computing services and resources to successfully complete and submit assignments.

7. Demonstrate an understanding of the political and economic nature of information and the rights of users from an information professional’s point of view through integration of these concepts and the effects of policies on these in written work and class discussion.

8. Apply critical thinking skills and recognize the multiple contexts of the IPE through class discussions and presentations and written assignments.
